

09/70204/9

ABSTRACT

An automated negotiations engine for iterative, multivariate negotiations of developments of products and programs which stores each set of terms proposed at each iteration to form the basis of the system of record. Active templates created using 5 the present invention can be used to inform other systems automatically of agreed upon terms so that products or computer programs can be generated by them.